LMM Lends Helping Hands to Harvest Apples

Giving back and building right relationships are at the core of Lutheran Metropolitan Ministry’s mission. LMM culinary students, along with staff partners, did just that when they worked alongside Board Emeritus, Rev. Hank Doll, to turn apple picking into a truly educational experience.

Not only is Doll an integral part of LMM’s board, he is also a Master Gardener and apple tree grower. Doll delivered bushels of apples from his very own backyard to LMM’s Central Kitchen. He then invited students in the Culinary Arts Training Program and staff to come learn about his horticulture in exchange for a helping hand.

Doll gave the staff a tour of his yard, where he has three large apple trees and a beautiful garden full of Dahlias and other flourishing plants. LMM staff picked Golden Delicious and Macintosh apples from two of his trees while Doll explained what it takes to care for apple trees, educating everyone as apples were harvested. Staff learned that the correct way to harvest apples from the tree is to carefully twist them off. By twisting the apple, rather than pulling, the apple and tree remain undamaged and the crop will be able to grow back just as strong the next season.

The apple crop was especially abundant this year. In all of the years Hank has been growing apples, he has never seen so many on one tree.

You’re Invited to Dinner Theatre at the Prison!

Think you know what prison is like? Your perceptions may soon change. It’s not often a prison invites the public inside its walls. Your chance to take part in a unique experience featuring the talents of dozens of women who are incarcerated is coming up on November 1st and you won’t want to miss it!

Residents of Northeast Reintegration Center (NERC) in Cleveland are the new faces of re-entry, and their tenacity is as great as the show they’re going to perform. Since a partnership formed between LMM and the Ohio Department of Rehabilitation and Correction nearly two years ago, dozens of Chopping for Change culinary students from NERC have been working on their talents in the kitchen. They’re ready to combine forces with their fellow residents who are learning the art of theatre. The result will be an evening of entertainment you’ll talk about for years to come.

Entertainment isn’t the only purpose of the Dinner Theatre. The night will also be an educational experience, as we continue to find innovative paths to changing the way re-entry is viewed by society. As you check in, you’ll take a guided tour of the facility. “We hope people will see we’re not spending our time here in vain,” says Amanda Freed, Northeast resident. “We’re working on ourselves and preparing to re-enter society better than we were when we left it.”
ALL ABOARD!
FIRST STOP: LMM!

The Cuyahoga County Office of Reentry invited community leaders to jump on Lolly the Trolley and ride around town to see various re-entry programs at work.

County Council members and key stakeholders got to see firsthand how Lutheran Metropolitan Ministry and others are expanding re-entry resources. It was a chance to meet people who most need the services and view ways those programs operate.

The re-entry tour began and ended at LMM. Council wrapped up the day with a tour of LMM, cooking demonstration, and lunch made by Chopping for Change culinary students.

Tree before. Between just the two trees, LMM staff helped pick over 25 bushels.

Central Kitchen then surprised Hank by using the fresh, homegrown apples to make a delicious dessert, salted caramel apple pie bars. The remaining apples were given to residents at the Men’s Shelter at 2100 Lakeside for a nutritious snack and used in various recipes in LMM’s Central Kitchen. We extend a heartfelt thank you to Rev. Hank Doll for sharing his abundant gardening knowledge and allowing LMM to enjoy the fruits of his labor.

Strategic Plan Explores Trauma Informed Workplace

The second phase of LMM’s strategic planning process was launched mid-year with ten projects, some of which are a continuation of the initial effort, and others, new efforts. One of the most popular themes that has gleaned a lot of energy and enthusiasm is our exploration of becoming a Trauma Informed Workplace (TIW). This theme fits into some key strategy areas, including improving program quality and impact on clients, as well as achieving an engaged workforce.

A trauma informed workplace recognizes that the effects of working in behavioral health and human services can take its toll on the workforce, and institutes approaches that prioritize taking care of staff to avoid compassion fatigue, secondary traumatic stress, vicarious trauma, and burnout. “We need to take care of our clients, but also take care of each other,” says TIW group member, Donnie Lynch. A workgroup of 11 staff partners (and growing!) has taken on the task of researching and exploring possible service system approaches, and will bring their recommendation to LMM leadership in coming months.

LMM’s goal is to create an environment that supports the health and well-being of not only persons we serve, but also for those who provide the service on the front line. “It’s intended to shift the way the staff looks at each other and clients and recognizes that trauma really affects people regularly and in ways we wouldn’t even be thinking about if we weren’t using this trauma lens,” says Erin Kray, TIW strategic planning group co-leader. “We should be changing the culture of how we relate to one another for the better.”

LMM staff helped harvest over 25 bushels of apples.

LMM Students Turn Tables on Local Chefs

LMM’s culinary students showed off their cooking skills as they created delicious dishes for participating savor restaurants and other local eateries. Students had the chance to interact with culinary community employers including Rising Star Coffee Roasters, Mabel’s BBQ, La Dolce Vita and University Hospitals. While dining, these chefs were able to learn about the Workforce Development Program and witness firsthand how LMM is preparing people for careers in the culinary arts.

“I just spoke with four qualified cook candidates,” said John Selick, University Hospitals’ Senior Culinary Manager. “I don’t get four in a year from job postings.”

The culinary students were honored to be given the opportunity to network with local chefs who believe in their skill set and their second chance at life. Employers even invited participants to their restaurants for employment opportunities. “Meeting with employers not only gave me help with believing in myself,” said Chopping for Change participant Tiffany Robinson, “but the hope that someone else believes in me as well!”

Chef John Selick from University Hospitals Ahuja Medical Center speaks to Chopping for Change participants about employment.
